

Computershare Among BusinessWeek's InfoTech100

Exceptional Performance in a Time of Difficulty

MELBOURNE, June 8, 2009 – Computershare Limited (ASX:CPU), a leading financial services provider for the global securities industry, today announced that it earned a spot on BusinessWeek's annual ranking of the top technology firms worldwide, the InfoTech 100. BusinessWeek, with the help of Standard & Poor's Compustat, looked at the financial results of tens of thousands of publicly traded technology-related companies to find the firms that managed to thrive despite weak economic conditions.

"Our goal has always been to provide superior service regardless of how financial markets around the world are being impacted by changes in the economy," said Stuart Crosby, President and CEO, Computershare Ltd. "In fact, we have continued to enhance our client service even as the world's financial markets continue to feel economic pressure. We're proud that at a time of concern for our clients, and all their stakeholders, they are able to feel confident about Computershare's performance."

Computershare was ranked number 10 in the world for return on equity and ranked number 16 in the world for shareholder returns, showing how exceptional service and a focus on efficient operations can lead to positive results. Recently, Computershare's US business was awarded the 2009 Customer Excellence & Satisfaction award from NICE Systems, a leader in the call centre industry.

"We have the unique advantage of a worldwide network," said Steven Rothbloom, President and CEO, Computershare US. "Computershare can apply our leading global solutions locally, such as our shareholder servicing Web solution, Investor Centre. Implementing these best practices with the latest technology – with a focus on performance measurement – allows Computershare to monitor operations so we can continuously improve the share ownership experience for both our clients and their members."
